

Give Flowers To Living Says Doty Of Frankfort

Levi Doty, Frankfort's grand old man, who has given many good ideas to his community has of late been thinking over a way of doing more good to the living. He says that life could be made more harmonious if people instead of going to court with their disputes would settle such matters by arbitration. Mr. Doty advocates that three disinterested parties hear the disputants sides and then rendering a decision in keeping with the facts. In this manner many unnecessary court costs could be saved.

Mr. Doty also thinks that the custom of buying expensive flowers for funerals ought to be relegated to other styles of the past and that the money so expended could be used in other and better ways that would help the living.

Mr. and Mrs. Doty observed their 64th wedding anniversary last month. Both are in good spirits.

Honor Bride To Be with Shower

The home was beautifully decorated in pink crepe paper streamers and 25 guests were present. Luncheon was played at 4 tables the prize winners being, Miss Lucile Teska, Mrs. Frank Schultz and Mrs. Emil Mau who presented their gifts to the honored guest.

A pretty decorated wagon drawn by little Ruth Wenner and laden with gifts were presented to Miss Wannemacher. A delightful lunch was served.

After the wedding the couple will go to housekeeping on the J.H. Mager farm.

Fire Sire Installed At Tinley Park

The new fire siren which the Tinley Park Vol. Fire Department purchased with the proceeds from their recent dance, has been installed, and can be heard for miles when in action.

The siren has been mounted on the second beam of the village water tower and is up quite a height so that the sound can travel far. The siren was installed Thursday. This is one of several methods of fire protection that Tinley Park is working on. The extension of the water mains and the purchase of a chemical fire truck are the other plans to complete Tinley's fire protection.

John F. Sullivan of Marengo, Ill., and Philip Hawley of Barrington, Ill., will address the meeting.

MIDLOTHIAN DEFEATS INCORPORATION ISSUE

Midlothian voted on incorporating last week, but the issue was defeated by 8 votes.

TESTING RAISES HAVOC WITH DAIRY HERDS

Cow testing has started in earnest in Cook County the past week and with the result, that about 90 per cent of the cattle tested have been condemned and the Chicago Stock Yards are flooded with cows which has shattered the price to pieces.

Farmers are being hard hit by the test and by present indications the big shortage of milk which is sure to come, the price of milk will be popped up to 25 cents a quart, perhaps 50 cents.

On the John Jungles farm 6 miles north of Mokena, 25 head of cattle were tested last week and 20 were condemned. At the Ralph Stellwagon farm 24 head of cattle were tested and 16 head were condemned. Another farmer near Orland had 26 head of cows but after the test, his herd was reduced to 6 head.

The milk supply at the Mokena Bowman Dairy Plant is growing less each day and it is feared that by the time the test is finished in this section, there will not be enough milk to keep the plant in operation, and some of the employees of the plant are already looking about for other jobs or preparing to move to other towns.

The test will undoubtedly come as near wrecking the dairy business in this section as anything has ever done.

We have heard the advice time and again, that consumptive people should drink plenty of milk, but with a threatened scarcity of milk and sky high prices, it will be impossible for the poor people to buy this daily needed food. What of the poor children and babies? Perhaps they will be allowed to die off so a few more millionaires can be created by high milk prices.

Statistics show that there are more cases of consumption in the cities than in the country, which goes to show that the country people are not contracting tuberculosis by drinking milk, but the big spread of the White Plague in the cities is not due to drinking milk from untested cows but from fast living and filthy homes. Many of the tenement flats are worse than pig pens and are disease germ incubators.

Big Exposition Coming to B. I.

A gigantic indoor business, professional and industrial exposition will be held at Eagles Hall, Grove Street and Western Avenue, Blue Island, Ill., the week of March 8th to 13th inclusive. The affair is under the auspices of the Greater Blue Island Booster Association and a cordial welcome awaits people from far and near.

The affair has already assumed such proportions that even the fondest dream of the business men, backers of the affair, has vanished and been swallowed up. More than 65 exhibitors will have large booths displaying their merchandise or manufacturing equipment. The latter will be in actual operation, showing weaving of wire screens, woodworking, printing, bottling of mineral waters and canning of food products.

One of the big features will be an entire floor of radios, automobiles and accessories, showing all the newest models of the popular cars of today. An automobile will be given away and various other contests in which all can participate will be carried on.

People of this vicinity will be well repaid by a visit to the Blue Island exposition. See display advertisement in this paper.

Will Preach Trial Sermon

Next Sunday a new pastor is to preach a trial sermon at the Marley Community church. The church is to select a new pastor to succeed the Rev. A. L. Brown who preached his farewell sermon a few weeks ago. Rev. Brown has entered the real estate business and has an office in Chicago.

CLARENCE E. BEAGLEY OPENS RADIO SHOP

James Creer, owner of a grocery and meat market in Orland, Ill., is remodeling his former warehouse into a modern store building. Clarence Beagley will occupy this building as a Radiola Display Room and Electrical Contracting office. It will be ready for occupancy about March first.

Mr. Beagley was the owner of the first radio in Orland and started in business when radio was in its infancy. He has built up his business by having the confidence and good will of the public, selling dependable merchandise, giving good service and by advertising. Mr. Beagley has been a constant advertiser in the News-Bulletin and gives this paper credit for much of his success. He has sold Radiolas in each of the nine towns surrounding Orland and states that this would have been impossible had it not been for his News-Bulletin advertising.

Mr. Beagley has also had good success in his Electrical Contracting. This branch of his business, is also serving the surrounding towns.

The Radio Corporation of America have made Mr. Beagley an authorized exclusive dealer of their products, thus proving that he is entitled to the support and patronage of our subscribers.

Ben D. Jones Out For County Treas.

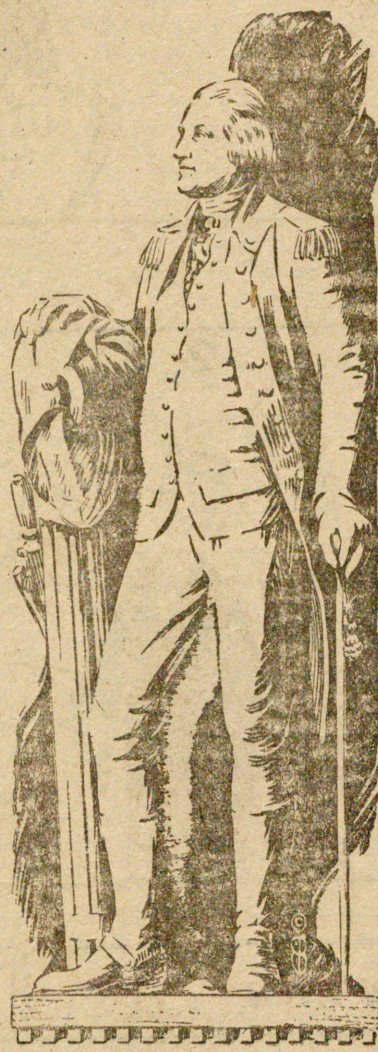

Ben D. Jones of Manhattan, Ill., announces that he is a candidate for the Republican Nomination for Treasurer of Will County.

Mr. Jones was nominated and elected County Treasurer at the primaries and election of 1918. Previous to his election the Legislature of Illinois had passed a bill which became effective July 1st, 1918, doing away with the Township Collectors and making the County Treasurer Tax Collector for the whole county, but designating no method whereby the tax should be collected. It thus devolved upon the newly elected Treasurer to develop a system which should be at once expeditious, accurate, and convenient. He found that his experience, for seven years, as an abstractor of titles in the office of Ex-Mayor, Wm. C. Barber, of Joliet, and manager of the Will County Abstract Company stood him in good stead in laying out a system for the collection of taxes and suggested the present duplicate tax receipt, as used to-day and so expeditious was the system that letters were received from County Treasurers all over the State of Illinois requesting descriptions of the system, and at the next session of the Legislature was enacted into a law and approved by Gov. Lowden as the method to be used throughout the State.

There were some misgivings among many people that the new method would be more expensive than the old method, but so effective was the system in operation, that at the end of his term nearly $200,000 had been turned into the common fund of the treasury as surplus earnings of the office.

Mr. Jones again showed his ability when as chairman for 4 years of the Tuberculosis Sanitarium Board of Will County, consisting of Wm. B. Kemp, Dr. Phillip McGinnis, and himself, which was chosen to select a site and erect the buildings for the Sanitarium. So carefully and painstaking and with such economical and harmonious zeal did the committee do the work that it has been the wonder of the State because of its beauty, convenience and low cost of construction. So pleased was the Board of Supervisors with the work of the committee, the Board accepted the work and extended a unanimous vote of thanks for the service. The T.B. Sanitarium Board gives their services without salary or reward but Mr. Jones is more pleased with this service and has more personal satisfaction from it than any public

Oak Lawn School Principal Victim of Pneumonia

The Oak Lawn Grammar School has had a terrible sorrow brought upon it thru the death of their beloved principal, Miss Ophelia Koelle who passed away last Wednesday afternoon with plural pneumonia. Miss Koelle was taken ill just a week before her death and every thing in anyone's power was done for her, but of no avail. When she first took ill she went to her home at 654 E. 64th Place in Chicago, where she and her mother and brother lived, being carried from the train to a cab.

The deceased attained the age of 60 years. Funeral services were held from her late home on Friday, February 12, at 1 P.M., then shipped to Billingsville, Mo., for interment, which took place Sunday afternoon, Feb. 14. Miss Koelle's sister, came from Billingsville, leaving her husband and son ill, to be with her sister. Some of the Oak Lawn school teachers accompanied the funeral party to Mo.

The deceased was taken over the C. E. I. Railroad, instead of the Wabash, as they had originally planned, and the Wabash promised to stop the 10 o'clock train or No. 13 for St. Louis for 25 minutes to allow the Oak Lawn people to pay their last respects and view the remains of one they loved, and the large crowd waiting at the depot was sadly disappointed when informed of the changed plans.

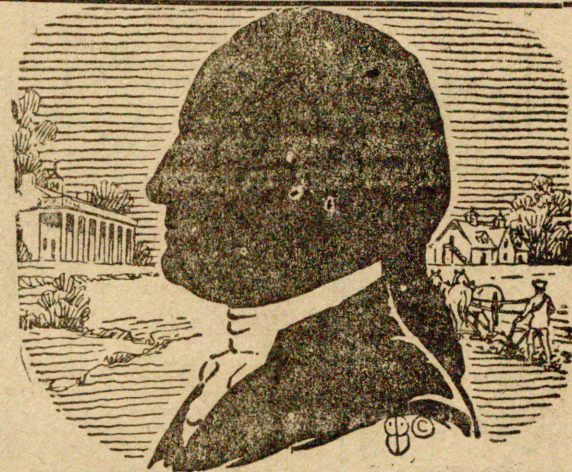

The school teachers gave a beautiful blanket of roses and the Oak Lawn Chamber of Commerce made a donation, the mother deciding how the money should be spent to the best advantage.

School was closed from Wednesday afternoon to the following Monday in respect to their departed principal and teacher.

No new principal has been appointed yet and Mrs. Exter is still filling the vacancy. This is the first time the Oak Lawn school has had this misfortune fall upon it, and sincerely hope it will be the last.

ERNEST LEHNERT APPOINTED ADMINISTRATOR

The will of the late Mrs. Henry Lehnert of Mokena was opened Tuesday. All of the personal effects of Mrs. Lehnert were ordered sold and the proceeds divided among the children. Ernest Lehnert is named administrator.

The Curse and Its Removal

By REV. GEORGE E. GUILLE
Extension Department, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—Cursed is the ground for thy sake.—Gen. 3:17.

Rev. G. E. Guille.

Human sin has brought a curse upon the whole creation. It extends to earth's remotest bounds and affects the land, the sea and the air. The fertility of earth has been restrained thereby and the very nature of the brute creation has been changed. At the conclusion of the six days of work God gave to man, to beasts and to fowl "every green herb for meat," and it was not, therefore, until the curse that animals became carnivorous. Men tell us that devastating storms and desolating droughts are the result of natural law, but the truth is that these are due to the derangement of natural law by reason of the curse. "For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now (Rom. 8:22). Every tear on the faded cheek, every sigh from the stricken soul, every bit of crepe on the doorknob, every funeral procession in the silent street bears witness to the awful curse of sin.

But what a glorious gospel our God has to tell! He pronounced this curse, in the necessity of His nature, but He has found a way for its removal. The Lord Jesus Christ in His atoning death has borne that curse for all who will receive Him as Savior, so that they are delivered morally from all its load. And in that day of His glory He shall remove the curse from the very material creation so that it shall groan no more.

Seven distinct features of the curse are mentioned. For every one of these Christ our Savior has answered in the death of the cross.

1. Feature number one, the word itself: "Cursed is the ground for thy sake." And this is the good news which God proclaims to offset it: "Christ has redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us; for it is written, Cursed is everyone that hangeth on a tree" (Gal. 3:13).

2. Feature number two: "In sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life." And of Him who was made a curse for us it is written, "A man of sorrows and acquainted with grief," saying as He went to the cross, "My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death" (Matt. 26:38).

3. The third feature is, "Thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth unto thee." The thorn has become, in the divine counsel, the symbol of creation's curse. But see! "When they had platted a crown of thorns, they put it upon His head" (Matt. 27:29). In derision of His kingly claims His foes thus crown Him, but the Spirit of God writes it down to tell another tale to you and me—of what He endured on our behalf that we might wear a crown of life.

4. The fourth feature is, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread." And of Him who died for us it is written, "And His sweat was it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground" (Luke 22:44).

5. The fifth tells of man's sad end: "Dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return." And the Lord has not omitted this, for this is the word that we hear Him using of Himself as He speaks, in Psalm 22:15, out of His humiliation to God, "Thou hast brought me into the dust of death!"

6. In the sixth feature we see the execution of God's sentence of death upon Adam. He had said, "In the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Death is separation from God, who is Life. Physical death is the separation of the spirit—which is man's moral likeness to God—from the body. Now God executes the threat: "So he drove out the man." Out from that garden of delight in which He had walked with Adam, that fallen sinner now goes. And in this place of exile from God have all the fallen sons of Adam been found. But Christ, too, has gone outside for us. "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me!" He cries, as in that awful place, outside the gate, he endured the hiding of the Father's face. Beneath the weight of our sins, He is treated like a sinner—"made sin" for us that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him.

7. The last feature displays God's infinite righteousness: "He placed at the east of the garden of Eden a flaming sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life." But that flaming sword has been, for believers, quenched in holy blood. "Awake, O sword, against my shepherd, and against the man that is my fellow, saith the Lord of hosts" (Zech. 13:7).

Jehovah lifted up the rod O Christ, it fell on thee. And in receiving that judgment stroke in our stead, we are forever delivered from our most just desert—saved and safe forever!

Beginning and End
Better it is to the right conduct of life to consider what will be the end of a thing than what is the beginning of it, for what promises fair at first, may prove ill, and what seems at first a disadvantage, may prove to be very advantageous.

Lesson for February 21

JESUS RAISES LAZARUS FROM THE DEAD

LESSON TEXT—John 11:1-57.
GOLDEN TEXT—"I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth on Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."—John 11:25.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Lazarus Raised from the Dead.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Lazarus Raised from the Dead.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Christ's Power Over Death.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christ the Resurrection and the Life.

I. Lazarus Sick (vv. 1, 2).

Even those who are in close fellowship with the Lord are not immune from sickness. Sorrow comes even to the homes where Jesus is loved.

II. Martha and Mary Send for Jesus (v. 3).

Those who receive Jesus into their home when all are well and happy can be sure of His love and sympathy when sickness and death overtake them.

III. Jesus' Strange Delay (vv. 4-6).
Martha and Mary sent for Jesus because He loved Lazarus. They said, "He whom Thou lovest is sick." Now, Jesus "abode in the same place" because He loved Lazarus and his sisters (v. 5). This mystery is to be explained by the fact that Jesus was divine and knew all things.

IV. Jesus Goes to the Bethany Home (vv. 7-17).

At length He turned His face toward the sorrowing home. Jesus knew and the disciples apparently knew that going into Judea meant His own death. His mission to this home was twofold: to restore to these sisters their brother and to strengthen the faith of the disciples (vv. 11-15). The word "sleep" reveals Jesus' estimate of death.

V. Jesus Teaching Martha (v. 18-27).

As He is nearing the village Martha meets Him with a complaint because of His delay. He ignores her complaint and teaches her concerning the resurrection and life.

1. "Thy Brother Shall Rise Again" (v. 23).

Most blessed words are these to fall upon the ears of a sorrowing sister for a dead brother.

2. "I Am the Resurrection and the Life" (vv. 25, 26).

He is the source of life and all are joined to Him by a living faith. The believer cannot die. The great truth indeed to be apprehended is that here we are united to the living Christ, the source of life, and that this is a pledge of bodily resurrection and eternal reunion.

VI. Jesus Weeping With Mary (vv. 28-35).

Mary fell at Jesus' feet, uttering the same words used by Martha, but no doubt with a different tone of voice and attitude. Her words were responded to with His tears—"Jesus wept." He is now a sympathizing Savior; He can be touched with the feelings of our infirmities (Heb. 4:15).

VII. Jesus Raising Lazarus (vv. 38-44).

His great sympathy now expresses itself in supernatural power. Sympathy would be valueless without this connection with divine power. In this stupendous miracle we see an illustration of the quickening into life of those dead in trespasses and sin.

Observe: 1. He Was Dead (v. 39).

This is a type of the sinner dead in trespasses and sins, even morally corrupt (Eph. 2:1).

2. The Stone Must Be Rolled Away (v. 39).

This is the part that the human must play.

3. Martha's Protest of Unbelief (v. 39).

She insisted that Lazarus had already undergone putrefaction.

4. Christ's Intimacy and Fellowship With the Father (v. 42).

In His prayer He declared that it was not for His sake that He prayed, but for those who stood by.

5. Christ's Manner of Dealing With Lazarus (v. 43).

It was by a call. He is calling men and women today by His Spirit, Word and providence.

6. The Response of Lazarus (v. 44).

This shows that the call of Jesus is with authority and power. With the call goes the power to heal and obey.

7. The Command to the People (v. 44).

They were to remove the grave clothes and set him free.

VIII. The Effect of This Miracle (vv. 45-57).

1. Some Believed (v. 45).

2. His Enemies Sought to Put Him to Death (vv. 46-53).

3. His Withdrawal (v. 54).

The Soul of Religion

Always remember that sincerity is the very soul of religion. A single intention to please God and to approve ourselves to Him must animate and govern all that we do.—Philip Doddridge.

Holiness

Holiness is religion shining. It is faith gone to work. It is charity coined into action, and devotion breathing benedictions on human suffering.—Bishop Huntington.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

BED-MAKING FOR INVALIDS

EVERYONE, whether sick or well, should have a comfortable bed. But invalids, especially those who have to pass any long period in bed, should have their beds made so that they will not only be comfortable and restful for the invalid, but also so that the comfort and convenience of the attendant may be increased.

The bed itself should be about 26 inches above the floor. Either too high or too low a bed makes proper care of the invalid difficult and unnecessarily tiring.

Single or three-quarter beds are best for the sick.

The bed should be firm and steady and should not sag, wobble or creak. The bed slats and springs should be well fitted and firm, so that there is no danger of the mattress falling down.

If possible the bed should be so placed in the room that the nurse has room to get around both sides and the foot. A bed shoved into a corner is not only harder for the nurse but also generally prevents a good circulation of air for the patient.

Metal bedsteads are better than wooden bedsteads, especially old ones that have cracks and open spaces in which bed bugs are apt to breed. An iron bed can be more easily washed and cleaned. A coat of fresh paint occasionally will keep it fresh and clean.

Springs should be firm, so that they will not sag in the middle. The mattress should be firm, smooth and thick. A thin mattress is uncomfortable, soon mats and wears through and often lets much cold air come through, which keeps the patient uncomfortable. Hair mattresses are good, but some of the present-day felt mattresses are just as good and much less expensive.

In making a bed for an invalid, put a good pad over the mattress, large enough to cover it and to tuck in smooth and tight. This may be a quilt or comfort. Over this spread a waterproof sheet which should cover at least the middle of the bed. Rubber sheeting, oilcloth or several layers of newspapers can be used. Spread this perfectly smooth, as wrinkles and ridges are apt to be very irritating to the patient.

The under sheet should be stretched tight and tucked in on all four sides. The upper sheet should be tucked in at the foot but left free at the sides so that the nurse can have easy access to the patient. Bed clothes should be as warm as is necessary to protect the patient, but not so heavy that the weight is burdensome.

A number of pillows of different sizes are a great comfort to the patient. Soft ones for the head, firm ones to support the shoulders and to support the body will help to keep the invalid comfortable and hasten his recovery.

HOW OYSTERS GROW

THE oyster scare of last winter, according to the Fish and Oyster Reporter, cost the oyster industry of this country $30,000,000. So completely was the bottom knocked out of the business that some of the older men said the oyster industry would not recover in ten years. But, as often happens, the excitement and discussion that resulted was a blessing in disguise and the oyster business today is in a healthier and more promising condition than it ever has been.

For one thing, the widespread investigation of the methods heretofore used in handling oysters, stimulated interest in the old problem of the artificial propagation of oysters. At a recent dinner of the National Association of Fisheries Commissioners held at Washington, artificially grown oysters were served for the first time at a banquet.

In 1879, Professor Brooks of Johns Hopkins tried to raise oysters artificially, but was never able to keep the eggs alive for more than five days. Others have had the same experience. Mr. Wells has been working on this problem for five years and has at last succeeded in growing food oysters under purely artificial conditions.

Oysters, says Mr. Wells, are suffering from the encroachment of civilization. In early days, they were found in quantities all along the Atlantic coast. Pollution of the sea water from towns along the coast and the increased demand for them has so reduced the supply that the beds are now in some places exhausted. If Mr. Wells can work out methods by which they can be grown in large quantities, we can have not only better oysters but cheaper oysters.

The possibilities for growing oysters are unlimited. In the warm summer months the lady oyster lays from six to ten million eggs, but, alas, most of them are eaten by fishes or other mollusks or die through failure to find something to cling to. Others are smothered by seaweeds or killed by freshets from the rivers or by sea storms. Those which survive cling together in clusters, develop a shell and must grow for four years before they are fit for food.

Artificial methods by which the oyster can be protected from its many enemies will greatly increase the supply of this delicious food.

"You allowed constipation to become chronic—until finally it resulted in organic disease."

"People don't realize how insidious constipation is. Its first effects are hardly more than annoyances—headaches, loss of appetite, sleeplessness and the like. But in time, as the body is subjected to continued intestinal poisoning, it may lead to high blood pressure, rheumatism, diabetes or even Bright's disease."

"Stop constipation if you wish to live long. Take a little Nujol every day—that will keep you regular."

Nujol relieves constipation in Nature's way

Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. It does not affect the stomach and is not absorbed by the body. Medical authorities approve Nujol because it is safe, gentle and natural in its action. Nujol makes up for a deficiency—temporary or chronic—in the supply of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular elimination without overtaxing the intestinal muscles.

Nujol can be taken for any length of time without ill effects. To insure internal cleanliness, it should be taken regularly in accordance with the directions on each bottle. Unlike laxatives, it does not form a habit and can be discontinued at any time. Ask your druggist for Nujol today and begin to enjoy the perfect health that is possible only when elimination is normal and regular.

Pulp and paper represent the largest of the manufacturing industries in Canada. Flour and grist milling comes second, and the production of lumber and forest products stands third.

"BLOSSOM TIME" CHICAGO
ENGAGEMENT POSITIVELY
ENDS MARCH 6.

Because of the increasing rather than decreasing demand for "Blossom Time" at the Studebaker, another extension of its Chicago stay has been agreed upon between the Messrs. Shubert and the management of the Studebaker. Two weeks more have been arranged to follow the last announced closing date of February 20th. In other words "Blossom Time" will now remain at the Studebaker up to and including the two performances of Saturday, March 6th.

The management state with emphasis, however, that there can be no further extensions. It was only with great difficulty and the upsetting of several companies in various cities that it was possible to provide for this latest extension of time. Engagements in large cities have been sacrificed to enable Chicago to have more performances of the favorite operetta—Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Washington and Baltimore among them. The limit to which such changes can be made by the booking factors has been reached, and thus intending patrons may be certain that the final date has now been permanently set.

There will be a special holiday matinee on Monday, February 22, to celebrate the birthday of the father of his country—the regular matinees of Wednesday and Saturday to be given also without change.

The success of "Blossom Time" in this engagement—really the greatest of the four here—has been surprising from the start, not only in its revelation of the numerous elements of the public, which in some way or another, had not seen and heard the lovely work in its previous manifestations, but in the new enthusiasm with which the matchless music of Franz Schubert has been received as rendered by the new and splendid cast.

Applications for seats from Chicago an out of town patrons, accompanied by check or money order will receive immediate and careful attention.

Prices evenings, Monday to Friday, Orchestra $2.50, Balconies $2.50, Matinee, $2.00, $1.50 and $1.00 Saturday Matinee, Orchestra, $2.50, balconies, $2.00, $1.50 $1.00. Saturday evenings, Orchestra, $3.00, Balconies, $3.00, $2.50, $2.00, $1.50, $1.00. Special matinee Washington's birthday, Monday Feb. 22, $1.00, $1.50 and $2.00

"THE FARMER'S CANDIDATE"

For Republican Nomination for

STATE REPRESENTATIVE

41st Senatorial District

Vote for S. W. Starr "The Farmer's Candidate" backed by the farmers of two counties and the Farmer's Weekly Review, and let him help solve our Agricultural problems for he has made a study of farming situation and best measures of relief.

"One of the best answers to the charge of favoritism to farmers that I have seen," says Mr. Starr, "comes from the President of the International Harvester Company. It is worth quoting."

The farmers' burden has been greatly increased through class legislation in favor of labor and industry, which does not bring any compensation in the way of return to the farmers. In other words we have raised the cost of his operations and the cost of everything he has to buy through special privileges granted to industry and labor, (by the tariff and other means), all of which he has added to his burden and for which I see no compensation until we reach the time when substantially all he produces may be consumed at home, and that will not happen during the present generation.

This is a business man's point of view but it defines the farmers position correctly.

Farmers are seeking to have some part in determining the price they are to receive for their products and to find the same kind of a market to sell in that they are obliged to buy in. They are simply trying to put the industry of agriculture on a plan of equality in returns with other industries.

Where is the place to begin? In Will County. By electing S. W. Starr, "The Farmer's Candidate."

Zero Hours of Automobile Accidents, 4, 5 and 8 P. M.

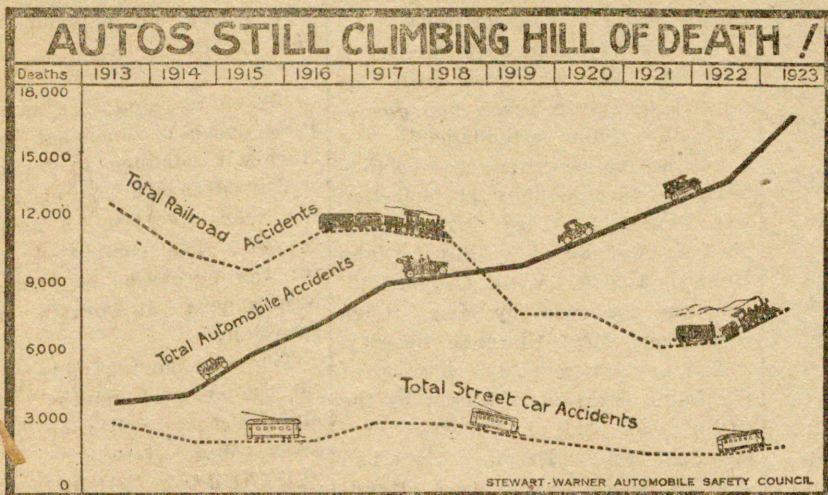

ONE thousand and thirty of Chicago's 11,785 auto accidents last year, according to the Stewart-Warner Safety Council for the prevention of automobile accidents, occurred between five and six o'clock, just when congestion is at its worst in the home-going rush. Only 47 of these 1,030 accidents were fatal.

Four o'clock is the children's zero hero. Thirty-three of the 182 children killed by autos in Chicago last year came to grief at four o'clock, playing in the streets after school.

Seven to nine is the dangerous time for adult auto fatalities, according to Chicago's 1924 record. Eighty-six of 353 such deaths occurred around the theater-going hours.

Auto Tragedies Increase as Other Travel Is Made Safer

WHILE railroad tragedies and street car accidents in the United States have gradually been diminishing in the last ten years, the annual toll exacted by automobile casualties is steadily mounting, says the Stewart-Warner Safety Council for the prevention of automobile accidents. Railroad accidents have been cut more than one-third, or from 12,520 in 1913 to 8,078 in 1923, the latest government figures available. Street car fatalities also have been cut down one-third or from 3,080 in 1913 to 2,006 ten years later. Automobile deaths, on the other hand, have increased over five-fold. Against the 3,522 deaths in 1913 we have 16,452 in 1923, and the score is growing each year.

Care, more care and still more care, is the solution of this national problem. The pedestrian must be always on the alert and as spry as a kangaroo, if he is to keep out of harm's way, and the driver for his part must never relax his vigilance for a moment when human lives are at his mercy.

ACCIDENT CAUSES SHOWN IN REPORT

Analysis by Massachusetts Indicates Speed and Inattention Principally to Blame.

In calling attention to the necessity for greater caution in the operation of automobiles on Illinois highways, Secretary of State Louis L. Emmerson today pointed out the result of the analysis of highway accidents by the state of Massachusetts.

"This analysis shows," he said, "that the greatest number of accidents from any single cause results from too fast driving and the next greatest number from inattention on the part of the driver."

Other causes in the order of their importance are: Child darting in front of a moving vehicle; pedestrian running across street; intoxicated operator; pedestrian stepping from behind a vehicle; driving on the wrong side of the road; confused operator; defective brakes; inexperience; driving too close to other vehicles; obstructed view.

"Other analyses show," Secretary Emmerson adds, "that 49 per cent of accidents are due to the fault of the operators, 43 per cent to the fault of other persons, 2 per cent to defective equipment and 6 per cent to other causes not listed."

OTHER STATES USE ILLINOIS MARKERS

Highway Marking System Used Here Is Adopted in Several Other Places.

The road marking system originated by the Illinois highway department is being adopted in many other states. The Illinois system shows three degrees of danger: First, the "Look" sign placed at approaches to small road intersections and other places where some degree of caution should be exercised; second, a "Caution" sign placed before bad turns and peculiar curves or other places of unusual hazard, and third, the "Danger" and "Stop" signs used before railroad crossings or at side roads, before crossing a hard road and other dangerous places.

Youth of Nation Tops Death List in U. S. Auto Fatalities

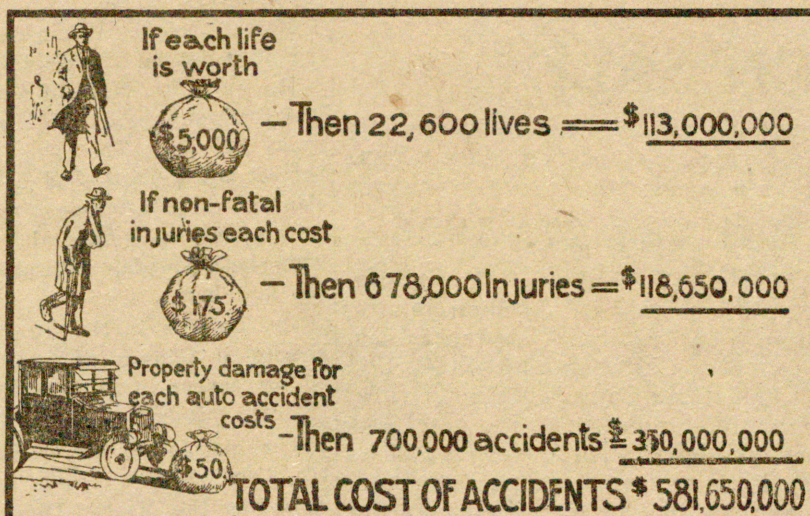

YOUTH pays the heaviest toll in annual automobile fatalities. From five to fifteen years is the period when the greatest number of fatal accidents occur, for both sexes. The chart shows the age distribution of automobile deaths for men and women as given in the latest mortality figures prepared by the government. These figures, says the Stewart-Warner Safety Council for the prevention of automobile accidents, emphasize the need for more playgrounds and increased safety education among school children.

Complete statistics are not possible, as only 85 per cent of the United States keeps mortality records. About 22,000 a year is generally conceded to be the annual number of automobile fatalities. For 8,621 males known to have been killed in one year there were only a third as many women, or 2,845, in spite of the fact that the male population is only 4 per cent greater than the female.

This chart does not take into consideration the 660,000 Americans who are injured annually by automobiles. Such figures are not available except in certain states, but that boys and girls again make up the bulk of such casualties is indicated by the records of New York state kept for the first nine months of 1925. Here 11,768, or practically one-third of the 38,392 injured, were under fifteen years of age.

$600,000,000 a Year Loss Caused by Auto Accidents

CLOSE to $600,000,000 a year is the annual economic loss due to automobile accidents, both fatal and non-fatal. This appalling sum is only an estimate, as no complete figures on the number of automobile accidents in the United States are available, but it has been conservatively estimated that 22,000 lose their lives each year by automobiles, and $5,000 a human life is the lowest value put on it by economists.

Of non-fatal accidents 678,000 occur annually, causing average cost of $175. Then, each accident averages $50 property damage, insurance records show. This makes the staggering total of $581,650,000 a year.

No account is taken here, points out the Stewart-Warner Safety Council for the prevention of automobile accidents, of the economic value of time lost by the injured due to delays caused by accidents or to minor property values, such as bent fenders, expense incurred while motor vehicles, particularly the commercial ones, are out of service, due to accidents. Were all these taken into the reckoning, the total figure would surely be doubled, or around $1,113,750,000.

Some idea of the enormity of this economic loss, most of which is avoidable, can be gained by such relationships as these: It is twice the cash income of the 1923 wheat crop; it is equal to about one-third of the much-discussed French debt to this country; and, finally, this loss would buy the entire city of Chicago at its present realty assessment valuation.

Mr. Theres won first prize. Refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Weidner were visited by the Stork Thursday A. M. Feb. 11, who left a 9 pound baby girl. This family now have nine children and they are children to be proud of too.

Master Robert Weidner is visiting his Aunt in Chicago this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Haas of Oak Lawn lost their youngest child last Saturday Feb. 13. The baby was in perfect health but had a convulsion Saturday afternoon and died very suddenly. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon from the late home.

Mr. Reed is in the Presbyterian hospital in Chicago and was operated for cancer in his right eye. He is doing nicely.

The quarantine was raised from the John Philbin home Sunday. This was the Health Department's valentine.

Wm. O'Brien and John Salihar won 1st and 2nd prizes at the St. Gerald's bunco party held Feb. 10.

The school's Lincoln's Birthday program which was to have been Thursday afternoon was postponed on account of the death of Miss Koelle.

Mrs. John Hopkins is still very ill with a nervous breakdown. We sincerely hope she soon regains her health.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Canklin, formerly of Oak Lawn, left for Los Angeles, Cal. last Wednesday. The spring of the year has been the only one of the four seasons that they have not visited in California so if they like it there this spring they will remain there permanently.

Mr. Leonard Wilson of Oak Lawn has returned from California to sell out his belongings and return to the sunny clime. His daughter Evelyn has married a prominent physician of Chicago and they too, will reside in Cal. Mrs. Wilson and son Gordon did not return and after Mr. Wilson gets back, they will build a home.

It is quite a coincidence, but Mrs. James Montgomery of Oak Lawn, is the daughter of Mrs. Catherine Collins of New Lenox, Ill., who was the 9th child of the Lynk family and a sister of Stanton Lynk, who with his wife celebrated their 70th wedding anniversary by dancing quadrilles as noted in last week's News-Bulletin. Mrs. Montgomery remembers her mother telling of how they traveled down the canal with horses on the bank pulling the flat boats with the family and cargo on them. Mrs. Collins died a number of years ago. She and her husband were married in the house where the Lynks now live. So the world isn't so large after all.

Some of Mrs. C.W. Larson's lady friends called on her Tuesday evening, while their husbands attended the Village Board meeting.

A noteworthy sentence in the sermon last Sunday by the Rev. Mr. E.A. Reese was, "Christian life is not obtained in a day, it is not so cheap, it takes the church many years to rear its children to become steady and worthy lives."

The Oak Lawn Billard Hall was robbed last Wednesday evening, Feb. 3rd. Several cartons of cigarettes and cedar chests full of candy and a considerable sum of money was taken. The burglars tried most every way to get in and finally succeeded thru a back window.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Last Sunday was the first of a series of sermons on Salvation: "What does it mean to be saved?" A group of 5 sermons is to answer many questions which arise in the minds of all folks concerning Salvation.

Ash Wednesday, the beginning of Lent, was celebrated Wednesday evening with Rev. Mardis from Evanston taking part in the interesting service.

The Young People will entertain the Young People from Morgan Park Congregational church Feb. 21 at 7 o'clock in the Oak Lawn church. On Feb. 28 the Young People from Worth will be entertained.

Mrs. C.J. Freed entertained the Ladies Aid Society on Thursday. The Ladies Aid is doing many interesting things and along with the work there is always a good fellowship.

The Girls Reserve met at the home of Lucile Tome. They are making presents for poor children in China.

The Boys Study Club is continuing its study of the unusual things in this world. As soon as the weather permits, hikes will be taken.

Interesting statement in last Sunday's sermon by the Rev. Mr. Reese: "You are your own worst enemy and the first step in Salvation, is to reach out with your better self toward the God of Salvation who is no God at all unless he is a Saving God."

TUBERCULOSIS CLINIC

Dr. R.T. Pettit of Ottawa will conduct a Tuberculosis clinic in the Public Health Council rooms in the Auditorium building on Wednesday February 24th between 9 and 12 A.M. and 1 to 3 P. M.

Elmer L. Satterlund, Pastor. The picture for Friday evening Feb. 26th is the Paramount production, "Miracle Man". In addition to this there will be an Aesop's Fable Comedy from the Pathe studios.

Sunday Feb. 28. Bible school at 9:30. Classes for all ages. If you live in Orland community and do not attend a Bible school, we welcome you. Every age has its group and you will be able to find your place.

Morning service. The Sunday morning services always aim to touch some practical religious problem, but there is also the emphasis upon worship as a part of the service.

Sunday evening the picture is entitled "The Call of Samuel". This Biblical episode is given a modern setting. The sermon will attempt to enlarge upon the modern problems deduced from this film.

The ordinance of the Lord's Supper will be observed on the first Sunday morning of March. This service will definitely prepare for the pre-Easter sermons which will follow and for the Passion Week. The climax of the Easter season will come on Easter Sunday. Watch for further announcements of our Pre-Easter program. On Easter Sunday morning the Sunday School will give an Easter program at the time of the morning service. In the evening, the Easter sermon will be given with the famous film, "Immortality" for a background. Do not miss this opportunity.

The Sunday school attendance is splendid—but we must still do some boosting to reach our goal—"150 in regular attendance"

At the morning service on Feb. 14th, a splendid musical selection was rendered. The instrumental phase was rendered by Royal Glahn violin and Mrs. Adele Cooper piano, and the vocal by Miss Helen Briggs and Mrs. Clarence Beagley.

The regular monthly meeting of the Adult Bible class, taught by the pastor, was held on Tuesday evening Feb. 9th. Despite the bad weather, there was a good attendance. The class was entertained in the home of Mrs. Betsy Austin. It was decided, among other things, to postpone the monthly meeting in March and instead have a social on April 13 at the church.

Te regular monthly meeting of "The Glad Game Class" was held on Thursday evening Feb. 11th at the home of Miss Myrtle Townsend. There was a good attendance and the class reports a good time.

CHURCH NEEDS HELP OF PRESS

Lack of church news in the news papers is not the fault of the papers or their editors; the blame usually lies with the churches and their pastors, says Rev. J.T. Brabner Smith, Chicago, of the World Service Commission of the Methodist Episcopal church.

"Editors would use much more space in the papers for church news if they could get news of general importance," he said. "There should be greater cooperation between the church and the press. The preacher will never win the world for God without the newspapers. It is foolish to try. Churches cannot do effective work unless they use the papers."

"Every church should try to buy space in the papers as well as furnish news—news, not sob stuff, not propaganda, not attacks on other creeds or churches. There are editors preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ just as faithfully as any preacher. Publishers, editors and reporters are human and many belong to churches. The church should use them to advertise it. The next great religious revival will come only when the pulpit and the press cooperate. My experience has been that editors are fair and unbiased and that newspapers and press associations are not biased or controlled by any church or business. They are free from control of interests, only guided by the best interests of all, and they are aiming to serve news to all persons irrespective of creed or person."

FRANKFORT

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stuckey residing near Frankfort entertained at their home last Thursday night, a large number of friends and neighbors at their home last Thursday night. The chief entertainment of the evening, was the reading of a rhythmic newspaper composed by Mrs. Stuckey, which contained items of current events and personal mention of all those present. Mrs. Stuckey is quite an interesting person and makes use of her poetical talent whenever she finds it possible. Her friends congratulated her for her work.

Bunco was played and prizes awarded, after which delightful refreshments were served. The guests all had a fine time and in departing expressed their wish for another "newspaper party" similar to this.

On Friday evening, February 12 "The Jolly Boys" gave a dance at the Frankfort hall which was sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. Carl Barlow. The guests were friends and neighbors and all had a fine time. Refreshments were served. A very clever poem written by Mrs. Fred Stuckey was read, but owing to lack of space we are unable to print the poem.

The first

recently by
Mrs. J. H.
Bourland,
Frankston,
Texas.

June 2, 1904, she writes:—

"For twenty-three years I was a constant sufferer from chronic catarrh. I had a severe misery and burning in the top of my head, a continual dropping of mucus into my throat causing frequent expectation. My entire system became involved and I grew worse. It seemed as if I could not recover from a constant cough and frequent attacks of bilious colic. My bowels were affected, causing alarming hemorrhages. I tried many remedies and finally took Pe-ru-na. In three days I was relieved of my bowel trouble and entirely cured by five bottles. I most cheerfully recommend Pe-ru-na."

June 30, 1924, Mrs. Bourland writes again:—

"I will soon be seventy-nine years old and enjoy good health for one of my age. I still recommend Pe-ru-na and take it myself when necessary."

For more than half a century Pe-ru-na has a proud record of good done. Men and women the world over stand ready to testify to its value in the treatment of all catarrhal disorders.

BIENVILLE

SYNOPSIS.—Traveling by canoe on the Mississippi, on his way to Biloxi, in the early days of the settlement of Louisiana, William Brampton, English spy, known to Indians and settlers as the "White Indian," sees a Natchez Indian post a declaration of war against the French. For his own purposes, he hastens to Biloxi to carry the news to Bienville, French governor. Brampton meets an old friend, Joe Labrador, Indian half-breed, who warns him Bienville has threatened to hang him as a spy. Brampton refuses to turn back. He falls in with Jules and Basile Mattor, on their way to Biloxi to secure wives from a ship, the Maire, bringing women from France. At Biloxi Brampton protects a woman from a sergeant's brutality.

"Will you walk to where the boats are, so you may go to the main?" I asked.

"God!" she shivered, staring frantically about. "To the main? To the wilderness! To the savages! Anything to escape that!"

And her gaze followed the group of forlorn creatures now pawing and mauling the two Mattors.

"My name is Brampton, I'm English. Something of an outlaw from Virginia. You came to help make Louisiana great?"

"I am Claire Dahlskaar. I've come to die," she simply replied.

"You fear that they misrepresented conditions to you?"

She gave me a quick sidelong glance, as sharp and penetrating as the point of a needle, and with more control of her voice informed me:

"I was picked up in a raid."

My first thought was that she must be the daughter of some poor farmer. For the company's agents in rounding up the friendless to ship overseas had no scruples in taking the daughters of the poor, be they ever so virtuous. But a glance at the slim white hands, so aristocratic and so unused to labor, sent a chill to my heart. She was poor, but no daughter of poor but honest people.

She had been picked up in a raid. That was easily understood. But a young woman with slim soft hands, who had not worked. And yet there was infinite appeal in the small face and silent grief. Her utter helplessness increased the inevitable suspicion. Anyway, it was not for me to condemn her.

I broke the silence by offering:

"I will walk with you to the shore and see you start in one of the first boats."

Her head jerked up as I spoke, because of some aloofness in my tone, I fear. I had not meant to be cruel, for she was heartsick and body-sick, a very young woman as helpless as a child, and marooned in a land which must be to her a perpetual revelation of horrors. "It will be good to go in the boat," she managed to say. "But perhaps not the first boat—it depends."

"It will largely depend on his excellency's orders," I corrected.

"But they—the women—said there would be much waiting. Too few boats—I can tell better when I see them loading."

Here was fine picking and choosing for one of her world.

"Your name is not French," I remarked for the sake of saying something as we walked along the shore.

"Danish—I am Danish," she softly replied.

"And from Paris, or one of the villages?"

"From Paris—last. I have no home—nothing."

We were now on the outskirts of a clamorous mob, where men and women fought to be first to leave the island. I saw Bienville calmly directing his soldiers. One packet was filled and starting for the main. Another had room for two or three, and Bienville ran his cool gaze over the pushing, jostling crowd. His eyes rested on me for a moment without a sign of recognition; then his arm shot out and a finger pointed in my direction, and his voice rose above the confusion to command:

"That woman back there. No; the one in black. Come, mademoiselle."

She paused for a moment and anxiously examined those aboard the boat, and then glided forward without a word or a glance for me. There was a commotion behind me and a short spider of a man, who walked like a sailor, and whose withered face denoted a long life—evilly spent if there is anything in physiognomy—snarled aloud, and with unexpected strength buried two men and a woman from his path in his efforts to follow her. She heard the animal-like cry and turned her head, and there was an awful horror in her gaze as she beheld the man; and her eyes sought mine and pleaded protection.

Instantly I knew she did not want this fellow to follow her. Intuition told me her fear of him was the reason she was unwilling to make for the boats until she had seen him depart, or knew he was left behind. Instinctively my long leg shot out and the toe of my moccasin caught his instep, and he was down on his face in the sand. By the time he scrambled to his feet she was in the boat and Bienville also was aboard. The governor was calling back to the sergeant:

"The others must wait till the next trip. Get them rations from the ship."

The boat drew away from the shore and the hideous little man was at my throat. I leaped back and he attacked for the second time. He had very long arms and one hand held a dirk. I guarded with the barrel of my musket and flung him back on the sand. This time he rose more slowly, his small, deep-set eyes glowing with murder as he took time to inspect me.

"That's much wiser," I told him.

"Your voyage made you bloodthirsty."

"Drown me in bilge, but you're English!" he exclaimed, some of the malevolence leaving his puckered face. Then venomously: "Blast your eyes! You stopped me from making the main."

He stood with his long arms hanging limply at his sides, and I noticed the little finger on each hand was missing. He had the appearance of great age, and yet he had been as active as a monkey when he sought my throat.

"His excellency would have turned you back. The boat was filled. They haven't taken off all the women yet," I said.

"Women!" he chuckled, turning to three women who had been attracted by the scene.

The three lost their brazen boldness and shrank back from his leering gaze. "Women!" he repeated. "I've seen 'em afloat, and I've seen 'em ashore. And the dear creatures always took kindly to old Bill Slasher."

"Old Six Fingers is your name," one cried, making the sign of the cross.

"You came over on the Maire?" I inquired.

"Aye, mate. Come because it was my choice. A man who sailed with Cap'n Davis and helped sack Pensacola in 'sixty-five ain't to be made to take any voyages he don't fancy. I want to git ashore and hunt for some of them mines all England and France is talking about."

"Mines, mines!" yelled a clear voice; and a young man in tattered finery came rushing from the direction of one of the ponds, his yellow curls blowing in the breeze, his pale dissolute face redeemed by a whimsical smile.

"The mad Mississippi!" screamed one of the wenches, throwing herself in his path and clawing at his ragged cloak which he wore jauntily although the sun poured down terrific heat.

The fellow brushed her aside and stared at me, recognizing me as a stranger. Then arranging his cloak and tenderly caressing the broken plume in his cap he lustily began proclaiming:

"Behold a Mississippi! Who wants some Mississippi? Ten thousand shares at sixteen thousand livres a share! Who buys Mississippi? You, fair sir, the chestnut hair and beard? Ten thousand shares at sixteen thousand livres! Who wants any Mississippi? The land discovered by Johnny L'as, where silver is so plentiful it is only used in paving roads, where lumps of gold are strewn so thickly that no one cares to dig beneath the surface!"

Six Fingers crowded by me, his eyes wolfish with greed as he listened to this fantastic harangue, just as he must have listened to it many times on the voyage across. He appeared to have been cast into a trance by the nimble mounting of riches, his eyes glittering and never leaving the speaker's wild countenance. As the speech ended Six Fingers shook his head to shake off the spell and turned to lower at the main. Now the tattered fellow was strutting toward me, doffing his worn cap and bowing low. As I acknowledged his salutation he courteously informed me:

"I am Francois Narbonne. These off-scourings say I am mad. Perhaps it is so. I was poisoned in rue Quincampoix. I sold my heritage, 100,000 livres, and bought an estate in this land of gold. I paid 30,000 livres a square league for land I never saw. Now I pay you my respects, as I take it you must be some overlord; or do you hold only socal tenure?"

I began to sense tragedy in the pale face and reckless speech. He was not mad, I decided, but close to it. I put him down as a young roisterer back in Paris, who had become fascinated by the ridiculous tales. He had invested his entire patrimony in the land he had never seen. The island, the cleft of the main, the nature of his fellow voyagers, had awakened him to the truth. The stock-jobber's patter was his fashion of showing self-delusion, perhaps was his only safeguard against insanity. I concluded I liked him. I briefly stated my name and my reasons for being on the Mississippi.

He threw back his head and laughed, laughed until the tears ran down his thin face. At last he gasped:

"A runaway Englishman forced to live here! And a Frenchman, who gives all he hath for the same blessed privilege! I must go without food for a day and say 12 paters and as many aves at the shrine of the Virgin. No, no. Not all that. I've been without food for three days. I owe nothing more than candles to the altar. I'll turn heretic. I'll turn Indian. Eh, Monsieur Brampton, would you kindly convince me with a display of the latest steps of the war dance?"

"H—!" But he's an odd fish!" mumbled Six Fingers. "He was dull enough coming over with his moping and groaning until we was two days from the coast. Then he began his talk about gold till one's mouth would water. Ah, now he begins."

Narbonne, who was addressing nonsense to the circle, suddenly gave his attention to me and explained:

"I was thirsty and wandered to one of the lakes of rare wine, which bless this island, and so was not here when the boats set sail. I was so busy gathering diamonds formed from dewdrops that I lost sight of the precious jewels among us here. I missed one jewel in particular; nor do I see her now. She was dressed in black, most unholy of colors for one entering this land of enchantment. Did she go to the mainland, or is she wandering about the island?"

"In the second boat," I coldly informed him.

The effect of the question on Six Fingers was amazing. He became transformed into a demon of hate, his squat body seeming to dilate as he crouched and glared at Narbonne.

"D—n your lugs!" he cried. "So that is your game, eh? You're after her."

"What! The old six-toed rat dares address the Mississippian without uncovering? I must have one of those withered ears." And out came the cut-and-thrust sword and Narbonne was lunging playfully and dexterously at the ancient. With a scream of rage Six Fingers leaped backward and yanked out his dirk, and catching it by the tip hurled it at his tormentor. Only by dropping to the ground did Narbonne escape it.

Before the matter could proceed to more serious results Sergeant Suarez was between the two men, and hoarsely bawling:

"His excellency rules that blood will have blood. Hanging for a killing. The galleys for the man who attempts to kill. You two are so full of life you shall come with me and help bury two dead men and a woman. The rest of you stay here. And as for you, Englishman, his excellency's orders are that you be here when he returns."

"I came purposely to meet him," I said. "Till we meet again, Monsieur Narbonne."

"Monsieur is very polite. I repeat his words and look ahead to meeting him on the golden, silver mainland. Pardi! A grave-digger! He! He! Come along, little six-toed rat, we may find gold."

CHAPTER III

Bad News and Sad News.

Two years before, Nicholas de Fer, under directions from the company, had prepared a map of the Mississippi country which flamed the fever for speculation. The company also made changes in the old map made by John Senex, the Englishman, so as to picture the country a wonderful El Dorado, while Herman Moll, prominent English cartographer, marked across his map of the country west of the Mississippi:

"This country is full of mines."

It is true that my own countrymen, in petitioning the Lords of Trade to establish military posts on the Bahamas and Port Royal island to offset the evils of France's activity in colonizing the valley, urged that the cost of these posts could be met by gold mined in the Appalachians—"if only explorations are made to discover such." But unlike the French, my people never deliberately fooled themselves. That the company would resort to almost any deception to lure colonists to Louisiana was shown when silver was carried from Mexico to the upper waters of the Mississippi and later "discovered" there as proof of the rich mines waiting to be uncovered.

Bienville appeared at last, and once more he kept me waiting until he had loaded the two packets; only this time he did not leave with them. I saw Narbonne and Six Fingers return from burying the dead and clamber aboard the second boat. Their grewsome task seemed to have made them excellent friends, for they laughed and talked in an uproarious fashion.

His excellency now approached me, his steady gaze never leaving my face. He abruptly began:

"Monsieur Brampton, your coming gives me a disagreeable duty to perform. I could sentence you to be hung. I have had 12 deserters hung, and a spy is worse."

"That depends on the point of view, your excellency," I replied, rising and facing him. "You would never consider one of your spies to be as deplorable a creature as one of your deserters. May I assume from your words that you do not intend to hang me?"

"It will be the galleys," he coldly answered. "I should prefer to send you and other malefactors to work in the silver mines in the West. But that cannot be until I've completed negotiations with the Spaniards."

"Soldiers from Santa Fe have already come to the Missouri," I informed him. "So there is a trail that might be safer than the gulf route."

"So!" he exclaimed, and I knew I had his interest.

Then he returned to my case and said:

"Monsieur Brampton, you know me. It must always be that an eye calls for an eye. Blood demands blood. Treachery calls for exacting punishment. I will be just; which means the price must be paid. Whether it's one of my soldiers, a poor savage, or a runaway English, the price must be paid."

"Your excellency, I was told on Pontchartrain that you were grieved at something I was supposed to have done. I was warned that you would deal with me severely if I fell into your hands. I asked where I could find you, and the answer was 'Ship Island.' Behold, I am here. Suppose you tell me what I have done to merit your displeasure. I have waited long here to be told."

"No, no, monsieur! Your assurance shall not blind me," he sternly replied. "I have no time to play with words. You know without being told how you have betrayed me."

I indignantly returned:

"Prove it! Or find one man to swear it on the Cross, and you're welcome to put me in a coffin and saw me in two. Your excellency, the accusation is as false as—"

He shook his head and morosely insisted:

"You would have a hard time proving your innocence. You are English. For three years you have been up and down the river. I know it has been said that you dare not go back to Carolina or Virginia. How do we know that is true? The last time you were here 40 of my men deserted immediately after you went up the river."

"So have they deserted before I ever saw the river. So they will continue to desert as long as they are allowed to run loose with the savages and forget the lessons of discipline. They have deserted to Pensacola as well as to the English colonies. They are protected by the priests in Pensacola even now. I repeat, on my oath, that I never encouraged a single desertion. Duty has driven me here, your excellency, and it is to be true to myself rather than because of your deserters that I will now complete my errand."

As I spoke I dropped on my knees in the sand and drew my knife.

"Can you read this?"

And with the knife-point I carefully began a picture in the sand. He stared down at my work, his broad forehead developing creases.

"Yes, I can read that," he slowly murmured. "It is a Natchez declaration of war against me. But I do not believe it."

"H—!" I cried, springing to my feet and thrusting the knife back in the sheath. "You not only will send me to the galleys, but you will insult me first!"

Brampton escapes from the clutches of Bienville. How does he do it?

Prodigy Died Early

Two hundred years ago, on June 27, 1725, died, if contemporary records are to be believed, a four-year-old child who surely holds the record for infant precocity, says the London Post. A few hours after Christian Heinecker (he was a little German) came into the world he spoke, and in ten months could converse on most subjects. By the time he was thirteen months old the Bible was an open book to him. At the end of two and a half years he could answer any question dealing with history and geography, and then turned his attention to languages. He learned to speak Latin and French fluently, but his feeble constitution broke down under the strain, and little Christian's "crowded hour" was at an end.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

Farmers' Wives are Happy in Canada

RURAL life in Canada appeals to the women folk. Schools and churches abound. The educational needs of the children are fully met. The standards of social life are high. American women find conditions in Canada all that could be desired for the upbringing of their families. The wives of American farmers who cross the imaginary line for the greater opportunities of newer, richer, cheaper land in this neighbor country become enthusiastic over Canada.

"We have found farming very good in this part. The land is very fertile—the best I have seen." So writes Mrs. Alda Levasseur, of Arborfield, Sask.

Mrs. S. L. Harris, of Crossfield, Alberta, has this to say: "This district is especially noted for oats, barley and rye, but it seems that farmers are going in more and more every year for wheat growing. Dairy cattle, hogs and poultry all do well here, and I don't think a farm is complete without them. My husband and I have always liked this country very much. We first came to this district in 1903, and have never known a failure. Anyone who is willing to work can certainly do more than make a living here. In 1915 we decided we would like a change, and went to Michigan, but we were glad to return in 1919."

Be Independent in Canada

The certainty of agricultural prosperity awaits you in Canada. Land is cheap—virgin soil on which the world's finest hard wheat can be raised—$15 to $20 per acre! (Free homesteads still available further back).

Canada wants more good farmers who will grow wealthy and independent. The Government of Canada stands ready to assist as well as welcome you and your family and neighbors. A simple explanation of this practical help is included in the information that will be forthcoming without charge or obligation if you write to the nearest salaried official of the Government of Canada. Write at once, thereby doing the whole family a good turn.

Notice To You All

Be sure and read this and remember when you want the best gas machine, money can buy, get the Laun Automatic Double Head-er Gas Machine. They are here to stay. Don't believe any agent or salesman who sells outside gas machines if he tells you that Laun & Co., and their gas machines are out of business and that you would have to buy from them if you ever want a gas machine. Laun & Co., have not sold out as some other agents tell you. We have been in business over 20 years, which proves that the Laun Gas Machine has no equal, and are here to satisfy you in the future. Laun & Co., will call on you from time to time, so if you are in need of anything just write to them and you will soon be taken care of. We have been told by some of our Beecher customers, that there were some agents to see them, who told them that the Laun Gas Machines were dangerous to use and should throw them out and buy their outside gas machine which he was selling. It seems that some of these agents who sell outside gas machines, can't sell any unless they tell the people a lot of lies about the Laun Gas Machines. You all know the Laun Gas Machines have been used in your neighborhood over 20 years, which proves to you that they are not dangerous. Use your own good judgement what to buy. Thanking you for past favors. Yours very respectfully, H. W. LAUN & CO., 6314 Parnell Ave., Chicago, Ill. Adv.
